

Product Disclosure Statement

---

Air Carrier Compliance Group, Inc. (ACCG) is in the business of providing assistance to Air Carriers and aircraft operators in obtaining FAA certifications and manual approvals. ACCG does not write, author, or provide company policies and procedures. Primarily services are in the form of consulting and publishing of documents in a manner that will assist Air Carriers, aircraft operators, and owners to obtain FAA approvals.

While Air Carrier Compliance Group, Inc. has sought to exercise due care in ensuring the accuracy of the material contained in all documents and web site content the material is made available on the understanding that the purchaser/owner/operator is responsible for the content.

Before relying on any manuals, minimum equipment lists, web site information, our downloadable information, or information that is provided in any manner (hard copies, e-mails), users should independently verify accuracy, currency, completeness and relevance for their purposes, and should obtain any proper legal or professional advice.

In most cases document content and information is provided by 3rd parties such as the United States Government, specifically the FAA. Other sources include aircraft manufacturers. It is important to understand that information may or may not apply, and that while some information may be safe for some operators, but for others it may be contrary to safety. The content of all documents, manuals, forms, and services provided by Air Carrier Compliance Group, Inc. is solely the responsibility of the user. All information content provided is intended to be used only after the operator has provided the necessary information required for their operations, policies, and procedures.